

Unemployment Benefits During A Strike

You may be entitled to receive unemployment benefits during a strike. The entitlement to benefits is based on the effect of the strike on the company. There is no clear line but a drop in the company's revenues of less than 20% should mean that you would be entitled to unemployment benefits if a strike occurred and you did not report to work.